Church has Vision

Gillingham Community Church (GCC) has a vision to be a real part of the community in Gillingham and to show how Jesus is relevant to our lives in the 21st century.

This Sunday, 12 September, GCC leader Pete Duke, will be sharing this vision and talking about the next step in turning it into reality. Many people have joined GCC recently and Pete believes God is building a team that will enable the church to complete the task.

You won't see GCC on the high street as they don't have a building. Despite this they are already involved in the community – e.g. working in Guys Marsh Prison, taking part in the Gillingham Festival, holding courses, contributing features to the town newsletter and Vale FM – and now they are taking it up a gear.

Graham Palmer, who moved to the area with his wife last November, said "We found GCC on the internet (www.gillinghamcommunitychurch.co.uk) and were impressed with their vision. Here was a church that was not only wanting to be relevant to society, but starting to put their ideas into practice. We came along once and were made so welcome that we didn't hesitate to make it our own church."

The Vision service will be held at 10:30am, Sunday 12th September at Gillingham Primary School. As usual, everyone is welcome to come along. Further info from Pete on 01747 821499.
